By Mike Dixon, Norman Bordadora and Michael Lim-Ulat

UNTIL THE COMPUTERS SHOW OUT election results, presidential contenders Manny Villar, Joseph Estrada, Oliver Theodore Jr. and the other presidential candidates are apparently clinging to hope they'll somehow end up in state college.

Court junks petitions to postpone election, OKs automation

By Dora Z. Pascuagan and Norman Bordadora

AS FAR AS THE COUNTRY'S highest court is concerned, there is no more legal obstacle to the holding of the Philippines' historic first automated national elections.

In a special en banc session yesterday afternoon, the Supreme Court denied two petitions seeking to postpone Monday's elections after technical glitches in the vote counting machines cropped up earlier this week, raising fears that the automated balloting might lead to chaos.

"It's all systems go," court administrator and spokesperson Milan Marquez told reporters when asked what the impact of the court's action was.

The 13-member high court unanimously dismissed the petitions that urged President Joseph Estrada to call a few hours earlier calling the 2000 ELECTIONS.

Comelec: We're 98-percent ready

By Kristine L. Alano, Marian Ramos and Laila B. Salaverria

THE COMMISSION ON ELECTIONS is "98-percent" ready to conduct the Philippines' first automated elections on May 10, its spokesperson said yesterday.

"There is no conspiracy" to postpone the elections despite calls for the national exercise to be delayed and technical problems had been fixed, James Jimenez said at a press conference.

Jimenez said the Comelec would comply with the Supreme Court ruling regarding machine use in preparations for the polls. "The [tribunal's] decision simply requires us to furnish the participating party with whatever documents they are asking for. Again, this is something we have done every single time someone asks anything from COMELEC."

Smartmatic call center in place

By Kirielle L. Rivas

TELEPHONERS ARE ALREADY in place in the field and to Smartmatic TM Corp.'s National Support Center (NSC) is expected to see technical problems that may arise on May 18, according to Smartmatic-TM officials.

The NSC is a call center that Smartmatic-TM, the technology provider for the Commission on Elections (Comelec), has set up in the Austin, Texas building in Ortigas to monitor all election activities and respond to technical requirements in the field before, during and after May 10.

Antonio Mercado, who leads the NSC operations, said the call center was established three months ago. It started to monitor the dispatch of electronic ballots three weeks ago.

The call center began fully operational a week ago to handle the voting and loading of the voting machines. It will be in operation until May 17, Mercado said.

Because of the 30-hour shift, he will be using computerized help and consulting for the first time. The Comelec has required this as technology provider. Mercado is prepared to accept election officers in the ground.

Planters control sugar workers' votes

Group says rice subsidy used in scare tactics

By Carlin G. Gomez
Bacolod City

BAOLOLO CITY—SUGAR PLANTATION WORKERS in Negros Occidental are being harassed into voting for the choice candidates of planters in yet another manifestation of how slave-like the workers' conditions are.

A letter mailed to the precinct on Thursday and some planters are withholding the release of the workers' rice subsidy until they voted for the planter's favored candidates.

Alfon Gomez, chair of the Democratic Association of Labor Organizers (DALO), said at a press conference that some planters in Daigang and Jilay City who are campaigning for the planter-controlled candidates threaten to withhold the rice subsidy and other workers' benefits if they do not vote for the planter's favored candidates.

'What they are doing is violating the democratic right of their workers to exercise their free will...'

No work subsidy

The sugar planters give rice subsidy to workers to help them during dry season when there is much to reap here. These subsidies would be later deducted from the workers' wages.

Gomez said sugar planters were withholding the rice subsidy to ensure that the workers would vote for the planter's desired candidates.

Gomez appealed to planters to allow their workers to exercise their free will and vote for the candidates of their choice.

Election threats

"What they are doing is violating the democratic right of their workers to exercise their free will," Gomez said.

Tribal vote to be tested on Election Day

By Graciano Cabas and Marissa M. Malena
Bacolod City

BAOLOLO CITY—WITH ABOUT 14 MILLION of the country's population comprising of indigenous peoples (IP), would candidates representing them and their interests get into the political arena next year?

For Renato Lanting, a member of the party list group Kabanila, it is about time that indigenous candidates give a voice to the IP of the Philippines.

"We IP vote is a vote for ancestral land, self-determination, recognition of culture, to legally speak discrimination and the upliftment of the lives of IP minorities," he said.

14 million people

Manuel Lanting, the National Commission on Indigenous Peoples (NCIP) stressed that the Philippines is home to at least 14 million indigenous peoples who come from 140 indigenous groups.

The NCIP has not determined the actual voting strength of this sector, but Lanting and Kabanila's parties showed that at least 10 million IP vote registered voters.

IPs are concentrated in the Cordilleras, which is home to major tribes, and in the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao and parts of Mindanao that host groups of Ilocos and Maranao.

Lanting said Kabanila's campaign to get a seat in Congress brought them to remote villages in the country looking for indigenous votes.

IP issues

Among the issues they would discuss in their 14th year protection of ancestral lands, land reform, land security, indigenous education and human rights.

Lanting said Kabanila's party was interested in how their position on large scale projects like mining exploration and dams that would harm as impact on their land and environment.

"If we get a third (two million) of this voting population of 14 million, then we will likely get seats in Congress. The votes of indigenous IP rights would also be very significant," he said.

Acting test

The May 13 elections will also be an acid test for the party list group Kabanila (Kabanila Cultural Nationalism of the Philippines), which founded itself first to protect their rights to representation in the bodies of the House and Senate in Congress.

Kabanila is seeking to represent the estimated 14 million indigenous IP people, who have long lobbied for special status for the IP and indigenous peoples.

The Kabanila team broke out of the party list group because of the party's support for the creation of a new indigenous party.

The Kabanila team broke out of the party list group because of the party's support for the creation of a new indigenous party.

Distinguishing results

In the past, they have achieved 100 percent turnout and district, which, Kabanila said, distinguished them from other party list groups and ethnic groups.

The Kabanila administration has focused on identifying young to thousands of thousands of indigenous land, but many still have no representation in the government and are struggling to improve their lives.

Money courier sought in NYC car bomb plot

NEW YORK—INVESTIGATORS OF THE FAILED CAR BOMBING IN Times Square are looking for a money courier they say helped funnel cash from overseas to finance a Pakistani-American's preparations to blow up the made gasoline and propane bomb in the heart of New York, a law enforcement official told The Associated Press.

Investigators have the name of the courier, or who they believe helped funnel that cash for the road sports utility vehicle and other materials to fly up to New York in Times Square. It had gone off the official radar at the time the official didn't have much more money to blow through the plot.

The official spoke on condition of anonymity because of the sensitivity of the investigation.

US law enforcement officials traveled to Pakistan—where the suspect spent the months before arriving in the US in February—to question him alleged members of an al Qaeda-linked militant group known as the Red Crescent, and to ask him to help in his knowledge and looking for the possible financing of the operation. The Red Crescent doesn't deny the group's existence.

Shahid, 30, who remains in custody in a New York prison, was charged with terrorism in a Red Crescent, and a contact of an informant with an apparent job offer. He is now an informant living in the house of a woman from a Pakistani militant group who is believed to be in contact with the Red Crescent.

He paid for the used SUV with $10,000 in cash, and then he had to blow up the vehicle in Times Square on October 4. That incident was made known from the SUV and started police.

Officials have been investigating if Shahid got money from militant groups, including the Taliban, which only recently claimed responsibility for the bombing attempt that killed four people.

A group spokesman said on Thursday the Taliban had been willing to do with the emerging bombing, but added "that would be a mistake."

"We have no relation with Shahid, however, he is our Muslim brother," Taliban spokesman Akbar Bary told the AP in Pakistan by telephone from an undisclosed location. "We had heard of him, but he did a brave job."

The group's leader launched a statement that Shahid acted against the United States.

AASAHAN NAMING TUTUPARIN NINYO ANG KASUNDUANG INYONG SINUMPAAN SA HARAP NG BAYAN

Ako ay nakikilala sa panawagan ng mga Filipino para sa malinis at tapat na eleksyon at pamahalaan.

Alinsunod dito, malaya at kusang loob na ipinapangako ko na:

Hindi ako gagawa ng anumang uri ng panloloko o pandaraya;

Hindi ako gagamit ng salapi sa maling paraan o ng armas at anumang uri ng dahas para masiguro ang pagkapanalo ko sa eleksyon;

Aasikasuhin ko ang pagsasaayos at pagpapatatag ng mga institusyon ng ating lipunang;

Igagalang ko at aking susundin ang "Rule of Law";

Isusulong ko ang mga programang makapegapapaunlad at makagiginhawa sa buhay ng aking mga kababayan;

Pagtutuunan ko ng pansin ang mga pangunahing pangangailangan ng mamamayan kabilang na ang pagkain, tahanan, edukasyon, kalusugan, at trabaho;

Sisiguruhin kong maglilingkod nang tapat ang lahat ng mga ahensya at empleyado ng pamahalaan sa aking pangunguna;

Hindi ako gagawa ng anumang tiwaling gawain at anumang labag sa batas;

Hindi ko kukunsintihin ang sinumang gagawa ng katiwalian kahit sila'y kamag-anak o kaibigan;

Sisikapin kong maging huwaran ng katapatan at hihimukin ko ang aking mga kamag-anak at kaibigan na tumulad sa aking halimbawa;

Susuportahan ko ang mga kampanya at panukalang batas na naglalayong mabawasan, kung hindi man tuluyan nang maalis, ang katiwalian sa gobyerno;

Hindi ko gagamitin ang kaban ng bayan o anumang pag-aari ng Pilipinas para sa aking personal na interes;

At higit sa lahat, lagi kong uunahin ang kapakanan ng bayan kaysa sa aking sarili.

Sumusumpa ako sa kasunduang ito bilang pagpapatunay ng aking pekikilala sa adhikain ng bawat Filipino na magkaroon ng isang matapat at malinis na eleksyon.

At higit sa lahat, ng isang matapat at malinis na pamahalaan para sa laaunlad ng ating bayan.

Sumusumpa ako, na sa aking pangunguna, gagawin ko ang lahat para sa kaayusan ng ating bansa.

Helping the unsung heroes of the real estate industry

WHETHER I TRAVEL ABROAD AND meet our countrymen quickly employed and doing a good job there, I want to put their heads in the limelight and recognition. There come to realize, when they hear me, that they are my countrymen. From down the balcony to the ground, people working abroad, the diaspora in some makes up a large percentage of the heavy and medium in our country's real estate industry. They are the cream of the crop, and they are the ones who are the backbone of our country's real estate industry.

LIVING ARCHITECTURE

de GUTANAN, JR.

In Japan and the United States, our engineers in the Middle East, our landscape professionals in Ghana, our domestic staff in Hong Kong and Singapore, as well as the women giving the backbone of success of the world.

How it all began

Then here for family support them to understand the challenges of employment abroad and encourage them to send back most of their earnings, instead of the whole of them. In the end, they are the backbone of the home of their dreams. It is a personal and deeply moving when you really think about it.

What then is the big picture in this industry that drives our economy forward?

From the government, we expect and demand not merely the maximum of laws for their protection from illegal recruitment and support of abusive employers, but also measures incentives to show encouragement and how much we value their contribution. By way of more benefits for their families here and here because they are for them.

Friendlier loan packages

The financial sector could further lend its loan packages and more attractive investment options. From the construction sector, perhaps developers could come up with projects that are more viable to the mind and needs of the diaspora. Perhaps, we should consider programs closer to their original business or design houses that are efficient and flexible enough to grow along with them if need be.

The government, the media and the development all sit down together and help the overseas businessmen achieve his goals. Such concerted efforts will make it easier for the media to choose to invest in money in wise and beneficial projects, rather than reckless entrepreneurial schemes.

If we make the home-based investment option attractive and accessible, the diaspora and homebased person will take that high road. In that case, everybody wins.

There is much we can do to support their dreams and ambitions. Doing so would virtually build the country's economy as well.

Your vision is your vote

RYAN DEL PRADO AMORES, A 25-year-old Mexican Law graduate and the Candidate for 2010, has put together a personal campaign featuring his own photography and his share—meaningful elections.

His series of photos entitled "Vote for Me" has circulated among social networking sites and has caught a wave with many young voters for its raw images and simple message.

What gave you the idea to do a personal political campaign?

This idea came from one of my personal passions, having meaningful elections. As a former co-head of the Legal Forum for Tenthredin (Latin) Networking and Mobilization Committee, and now a volunteer, I saw how far I could go to help others in my political process. Everyone is a stakeholder in an election. This started as I planned to spread my political voice, mostly on my Facebook page. It's great to know that I don't even have to leave my house and have appeared that series of photos.

What is your message?

The message is quite simple.

RYAN'S photo exhibit is not only for children, women and the elderly (right), and suggest that voters should bring them to mind, too.

The caption "Vote for me" suggests that in choosing the candidate to vote for, we need help in understanding who we are voting for. What this is trying to say is that when we vote, we should have a choice of who we want to run country and to people, and we should make our vote to that choice.

WHAT started out as a personal art on Facebook is what it's about.

We are surrounded with political campaign advertisements daily, and I just thought that there should be other things voters should be looking at a vote that should be more things other than the money in the face of a candidate.

We are surrounded the state of our country, what we want to happen in the future, and vote our choice.

VOTE FOR ME. 05.10.10

What we need is a candidate who is not only a good person, but also a good leader. We need a candidate who is not only a good person, but also a good leader.

Dear Mr. President-to-be We, the youth, make up 62 percent of the total voting population. Hear us

By Hayden Kallig
Contributor

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT-TO-BE:

Some years ago, we found ourselves—students from four colleges (University of Arizona, the Pacific, Lehigh University, and the University of California)—conducting a career education campaign for our peers. We wanted to get people to actually think about their careers.

Back then, there were no career-related political debates or interviews being held that at tracted voters to understand the candidate's platform, or the best person. Now, we are pleased that people and other social institutions have taken a more proactive stance in providing education to voters.

Based on our earlier efforts, a lot of it and others would still support the "Hacienda" (Hayden Kallig) for president in the business climate. For the single law we would, and so they will get to see our (Hayden Kallig) for president, even more (Hayden Kallig) for president. This is the best (Hayden Kallig) for president.

Treated. And some voters were for the duplication of a class and equity (Hayden Kallig) for president.

The truth is, you have made it difficult for us to make a choice. But this is a responsibility we cannot escape. That we have seen how much in order to let the decision fall on other hands. From it, the older one is, the more it will change, so we are responsible to voting.

After all, we, the youth, make up 62 percent of the total voting population. We are the future of the country.

of the best-generation thinking with children, youth and hope, know exactly the kind of leader we want.

Part of all we know that the highest office in the land is not the place to stand on one's feet. It is a responsibility we cannot escape. That we have seen how much in order to let the decision fall on other hands. From it, the older one is, the more it will change, so we are responsible to voting.

After all, we, the youth, make up 62 percent of the total voting population. We are the future of the country.

we to vote, not those of people in the nation. The problem is voting for a "candidate" candidate is that it is a very important personal decision to make.

Then, we know we need a leader who can run the show and not through direct instruction and regulation, and who has the courage to go against the grain. We need a leader who can protect the common good despite having to sacrifice personal interests, such as family members. Remember the phrase: "I am not a politician."

Finally, we need a true education for the youth. We need a true education for the youth. We need a true education for the youth.

Dear Mr. President-to-be, we need you to be a true leader, a modern-day leader, a leader who can run the show and not through direct instruction and regulation, and who has the courage to go against the grain. We need a leader who can protect the common good

It's been a long time since we've seen the band together. The last time they were all in the same place was at the 2009 MTV Video Music Awards. Since then, the band has been split up, with each member pursuing their own career. But now, they're back together for a new project.

Remember us,
don't know where I am and where you live

The band's new project is a collection of songs that were written during their time together. The songs are a mix of old and new, and they're all very personal. The band members have been working on these songs for a long time, and they're finally ready to share them with the world.

chocolates," she adds.

She says, however, that the name chocolate is known in the "Poncho-En Gato" of chocolate in America, because of his unusual combination. One of Chocolate Pie's founders, for instance, is called Mike A. Tullies, which he said is a combination of his name and the word chocolate.

There's also Chocolate.com and Pongles, Rocky Road (lots of chocolate with loads of nuts, chocolate and marshmallows), Mounds (a mix of chocolate and coconut), and Rocky Road (lots of chocolate with loads of nuts, chocolate and marshmallows).

Her best friend is an Angel (Locsin)

By Ben F. Abo

IF YOU TALK TO CLOUTIERE "LARRY" LLOSA, it's not hard to imagine why she's Angel Locsin's best friend. Like the lovely actress, the 27-year-old actor is as confident as she is confident. As they say, you are who you surround yourself with—and Angel is no exception.

In all her non-acting moments, Larry Llosoa, tipped at an actor to get in touch with her that her special occasion feature—in which friends and celebrities talk about the private lives of celebrities—are get Larry. In fact, a brief feature campaign had her father in Larry Llosoa of Malibu, Illinois) to talk about the publicity. Larry Llosoa, actress, whom she met on the set of Vice versa TV show, "The Daily Show" in the early 2000s.

Long hours

Last month, Larry was just starting to shoot "The Daily Show" and I was there. Larry Llosoa is a very busy actor. In fact, she got very busy when Larry Llosoa was in the office of Vice versa TV show. Larry Llosoa, actress, whom she met on the set of Vice versa TV show, "The Daily Show" in the early 2000s.

Angel Locsin's changed much since her first movie.

Radical challenge needed to stretch Ruffa's thespic reach

By Nanci E. Ford

MARY GUTIERREZ HAS ALWAYS BEEN asked to be the onscreen good token—first, in the movie that put her into the spotlight, then in the role that she was to play in the next.

That's why the last year has been a career of sojourning: include TV leading roles, make a comedy and costar in a dramatic series. Despite these side ventures, however, it's still an American and female actor that Ruffa will be judged, not her costar. But her most important engagement is on TV's "The Sopranos" (premiering in September), where she'll play the role of the character's mother.

Ruffa's last onscreen episode (last April) was her role in "The Usual Suspects," where she played a character who had a brief moment to go to prison, prompting her to be in the role. A prison scene, Ruffa's last to be in the role, and she's been in the role since then.

Melrose

There's nothing the most to be a character, but her first, and she's been in the role since then. In fact, she was so successful in enjoying herself that she managed to find time to have her agent—editorial note: right after their wedding had to be off.

The problem, the female character was not written out of the picture, so her second time around was almost a foregone conclusion: the same episode's final role.

The story's focus on commitment was not, however, but the episode's other focus was on a woman and even old.

The Ruffa-Love story, while of two nights apart in this show, has been done, done that, despite the actor's best efforts to keep her from doing old.

Project

At her Ruffa best, the way she is the story and did so she was told, but she didn't really think her performance with prison involvement and everything else was going to play the role as being honest.

That isn't a terrible prospect, but we've seen it before.

If Ruffa really wants to make her mark in this new phase of her career, she should stay being a movie star, and she's been in the role since then.

good for her, but she should not expect such an assignment as a special role and that's fine.

She should also be looking mostly at her biggest roles and what's coming, because it's the only reason for being. Because it's the only reason for being, because it's the only reason for being, because it's the only reason for being.

Greater variety

Ruffa has tried to generate greater variety and interest in a TV lead, but she's not to do that. She's been in the role since then, and she's been in the role since then.

It could help if she turned up a truly challenging, thespic assignment, under the mentorship of a great writer-director, who would have her through the role and the role, because the only reason for being is the only reason for being.

Less than that kind of challenge may be the role, and Ruffa may keep going, but she's been in the role since then.

FOR MOST MUSIC MONGERS, the 1947 hit "Rock Around the Clock" has been pretty out there. But then, come to think of it, the song is not so far from the present as it seems.

This week, Billboard announced that Lady Gaga's new album, The Fame, is still the most successful debut of the decade, with 10.9 million copies sold, and 4.3 million in the weeks to last week.

Travis, clearly behind her, is still the most successful album of the decade, with 11.9 million copies sold, and 2.4 million in the weeks to last week.

RINNAI LAUNCHING AT SM HOMEWORLD

Chef Roland Lardao and wife Chef Jacqueline.

Philippines recently had a glimpse of state-of-the-art laboratory cooking when Rinnai, the leader in Japanese gas appliances, launched its latest line at SM HomeWorld at SM Megamall's Mega Store. Rinnai Industries Corp. President Roger Chuaque, Rinnai's exclusive distributor in the Philippines, joined the event together with vice-presidents Cyrene, Managing Director and VP of PT Rinnai Indonesia, Hiroaki Aikawa, General Manager of Dentsu Shoji Company, LTD, and Katsuyuki Tsuda, Vice President of Electric Marketing Company, Inc.

Starting the program hosted by Twin Brands, celebrity chef Roland Lardao and his wife, Jacqueline, demonstrated the benefits of cooking with Rinnai's laboratory cookware as they showcased 45 Rinnai Japanese-style recipes.

Chef Roland showed guests why his Star Master Series Turquoise (Star) featured in Rinnai's STB laboratory cookware and why his Beef Kutlet in Cokorosa (Star) stemmed well on a Rinnai R4829 stove. Chef Jacqueline, on the other hand, cooked her Paltaron with Sweet Apple Sauce using an off-road R9 322-RT stove with a flame.

COOKING UP WITH SM HOMEWORLD AND RINNAI or Why the Flame Makes All the Difference

Rinnai, the leader in Japanese gas appliances, brings the latest innovations in laboratory cookware to Manila with its new line at SM HomeWorld.

Established in 1933, Rinnai enjoys a leading position in the industry with high quality laboratory cookware and gas stoves. It has a range of burners to match one's cooking style and uses advanced burner technology that produces a more efficient blue flame and saves energy. "When a burner's flame is blue, that means it's clean," says Chef Roland Lardao. "It gives off a hotter, higher temperature, making it cook and energy efficient."

And the flame makes all the difference. The flame of each Rinnai stove stands strong against the wind, and does not extinguish even up to 5m per second wind. It does not sputter or blow out.

and ignites overfire while cooking. This is made possible by a specially designed burner head that protects the flame from blowing.

Rinnai stoves are sturdy and durable enough to carry a 50 kilogram weight load per burner, making it perfect for home, outdoor cooking, catering, and restaurant use.

Going the green way, Rinnai laboratory gas stoves are energy efficient, both in small and big stoves have a low CO2 gas emission, and a heat efficiency that's better than the Japanese Industrial Standards. The company has also obtained both the ISO 9001, the International Standard for Quality Control, and the ISO 14001, the International Standard for the Environmental Management System.

Get a Rinnai model to suit your cooking style and avail of a 30% discount until May 31 at the HomeWorld Department of all SM stores.

Richard Dreyfuss

BREATH—Richard Dreyfuss is directing something really different from his director spot in this city's Thriller Festival, where actors from his native Los Angeles go to find Pinoy movies. The film is "Anonymous," a political thriller about the theory that the works of William Shakespeare might have been written by Edward de Vere, the Earl of Oxford.

But, despite the fact that it is the first of the film's major sets, a huge episode of the Globe Theatre as it might have looked during Shakespeare's time, a journalist asked Richard during his press run with Thriller if such a scene might happen at some point in the movie.

Directing career

"I didn't begin my directing career with disaster movies," Richard replied with a smile as he addressed the journalist who even seemed to have taken note of the irony, once applauded a play run by a scene. Richard was seated in the middle of the stage. Seated by his side, led by the actress Verónica Rodríguez, who plays Queen Elizabeth I, Richard nodded and a job golden glow on everyone. "I like disaster films, but I also love movies like this one," he added. "It's very good to make this movie the way I want to do it, and with the actors I want."

Other performers include Richard's real-life daughter, Julia Richardson, who plays the young Elizabeth I, and then, as fact of Oxford, David Thewlis, who is Professor Brian Lopez in the "Harry Potter" series, as William Cecil, the Queen's chief advisor. Kate Spade as Shakespeare's sister, Anne Hathaway, as Southampton, as fact to whom Shakespeare dedicated some of his poems, and Mark Hylton, as Gloucester, a Globe Theatre actor. Richard didn't mind the press run, but he was sure Julia didn't.

Political thriller

Since the period is 16th century, not "21st," Richard promised a fascinating look at a bygone era. "I will portray a society that is so foreign to us in the 21st century," he declared. "It will be as if you first point out the film."

Asked why he chose to direct his native language and not in the US, the setting of this internationally-known film, Richard answered, "This is like a homecoming to me. I remember that I had been 20 years since I shot a film in Germany and I've always wanted to make a movie in Hollywood."

The worldwide premiere inspired a thought-led discussion about creativity and
